From the Editor

For me, the real pleasure in editing Inventory Selections has been the chance to participate actively in New England Rare Coin Galleries' search for excellence. Each time we complete a project, whether it be a catalog such as this, a brochure, or simply a new order form, there's always someone at New England who'll ask: "How can we do it better next time? How can we give our customers more?" It was this type of thinking which led to the first color photography in Inventory Selections; to the beautiful "wide-format" catalogs now published by New England Rare Coin Auctions; to the birth of New England World Selections; to the genesis of New England Rare Coin Partnership I; and now, to this first Inventory Selections Special.

To our knowledge, no other regularly-published rare coin catalog has included a more complete array of numismatic features than the one you now hold in your hand. In the following pages, you'll find the most extensive offering of rare U.S. coinage in the world; select offerings of ancient and world coins; high-quality U.S. currency; market news; numismatic trivia; special feature articles; plus gorgeous color coin photography. More special issues of this type are now in the planning stages—and perhaps they'll be better issues. Because, even as you read this, someone here at New England will be placing a copy of this Inventory Selections Special on my desk, pointing to a page here and there, and asking, "How can we do this better? How can we give our customers more?"

My thanks to everyone who helped to put the June Inventory Selections Special together—with a special thanks to Mr. Edward Rochette and Mr. Neil Harris of the American Numismatic Association, and to Dr. Charles Niemeyer and Dr. Stan J. Woollams for their aid and guidance in preparing this month's feature articles.

James Halperin

In August of 1969, The Wayland Town Crier, a local Massachusetts newspaper, reported:

"With an interest in coins and stamps, and a natural business head, Jim Halperin, 16, of Wayland, is making something of his summer—possibly, the rest of his life. Jim's enthusiasm led him to rent a store at 74 Main St., Wayland, and set up a coin and stamp shop which he called 'Philatelics.' 'I thought it was an interesting thing to do for the summer,' he said. 'If it turns out well, it will be something I can do for a long time.'"

Philatelics did indeed turn out well. Today, the former small-town coin and stamp shop is a multi-million-dollar, Boston-based numismatic firm with the world's largest inventory of high-quality rare U.S. coinage: New England Rare Coin Galleries.

Since those early days in 1969, when "Philatelics" inventory was worth only $100, many talented and dedicated individuals have nurtured the firm's growth. But it has always been the numismatic expertise, business savvy and unbounded energy of founder Jim Halperin—a man who Maurice Rosen of The Rosen Numismatic Advisory has called "one of the country's most astute coin dealers"—that has given New England Rare Coin Galleries its direction and character.

Jim himself admits that, even in 1969, he had definite goals in mind for his firm. "I was never a pure hobbyist. Even at 16, when I started Philatelics, I knew I wanted my own business and I wanted it to be a very, very tightly run, legitimate concern. So I immediately set up a simple bookkeeping system and recorded everything I bought and sold, so there would be no slip-ups." But even such careful planning did not ensure immediate success. "There were weeks at a time when nobody stopped by. But I somehow managed to pay the $175-a-month rent—usually with some profit left over."

The largest profits, of course, were in coins rather than stamps, and Jim soon shifted the emphasis of his business to numismatics.

"I think coins proved better than stamps because of their origins. Coins are created as mediums of exchange. Stamps are not. In fact, some stamps are sold at below their face value. So there is a natural tendency among investors to trust coins more than stamps." Jim totally immersed himself in coins after attending his first numismatic convention in 1971. "Ed Leventhol of J.J. Teaparty brought me to the Blue Ridge Show in Chatanooga. That was the first time I met Steve Ivy, Fred Sweeney, Gary Sturtridge, Julian Leidman and some of the other large coin dealers. That experience gave me a working knowledge of professional coin trading—and brought me face to face with the collecting public."

Soon after, Jim ran his first ad in Coin World and again shifted the emphasis of his business—this time, from rare coin wholesaling to retailing. "That was when I began doing catalogs. My strategy was to break even on the ads and make profits from the catalogs. But that meant I had to build a solid customer base around those catalogs. To do that, I made sure that my grading was as strict as possible."

From that point on, Jim's business began to grow rapidly. He moved his headquarters to the impressive Sheraton-Tara Office Building in Framingham, Massachusetts, renamed his firm New England Rare Coin Galleries, and in 1975, began New England Rare Coin Auctions. "We were the first mid-sized numismatic firm to have an auction division, and I think we surprised a lot of people—not only because of our size but because, despite our size, we did a thoroughly professional job. There's no doubt that the reputation of NERCA increased New England's status in the industry."

But perhaps the biggest jump in New England's growth has occurred in recent years. "I saw the rare coins investment boom coming. I don't know how. I guess I have some sort of instinct, and by that time I'd learned to trust my instinct." Jim acted upon his instincts by moving New England's offices to the heart of Boston's financial district. He also hired Charles Lidman, now New England's President, to help restructure operations. "It was Charlie's job to straighten out any little bugs in customer services before the boom hit. As it turned out, he did more than that. He actually created some new services and he helped establish New England as the numismatic firm for investors. That's something I'm really proud of. Not every rare coin company has topnotch expertise in both the collecting and investing sides of the market—and I think it's been that dual strength that has made New England so prosperous today."

Jim's activities outside New England Rare Coin Galleries have been as impressive as his professional life. He has studied psychology at Harvard University, is a flawless logician and excellent mathematician, and he became a national class backgammon player within a year of learning the game. "But what I'd really like to do someday is get into the political arena—especially in the area of public education. I have some theories about the educational system that I think could better it."

Jim Halperin's current role at New England is still that of guiding and directing its course as the flavor of the numismatic market shifts. He is excited about the firm's recent expansion into World Coins and U.S. Currency, and he still takes the time to thoroughly review New England's extensive inventory. "What I really love to do is buy coins and grade coins. Coincidentally, that has been good for the company, because my personal contact with each coin New England sells ensures that the strict grading standards I set so many years ago are still being maintained today."

U.S. Rare Coins

Because we wanted this issue of Inventory Selections to be as special as possible, New England Rare Coin Galleries' numismatists have gathered over $25,000,000 worth of rare U.S. coinage to present here. Moreover, our catalogers have priced these beautiful items with a particularly conservative eye — and they have included several "Special Value" offerings throughout the issue. However, in order to bring you these savings on high-quality U.S. coinage, we cannot accept deferred payment on any of these items. (Our numismatists will accept deferred payment on U.S. Currency and World Coins.) We hope you will take advantage of the attractive price levels we offer this month, and if we can be of service in helping you order, please call us toll-free.

"Pedigree can greatly affect a silver dollar's desirability and value."

Christopher Tracey
Vice-President, Retail Sales

"When a beautiful coin has a fascinating historical background—when you can show a coin to friends and excite them not only by its appearance but by where it's been, who has owned it and how you obtained it—that's 'pedigree.' Pedigree is an important part of numismatics, because a coin's pedigree can greatly affect its desirability and value.

"This is why major auction houses refer to pedigree when cataloging consignments—and why New England decided to offer Morgan Dollars from the LaVerre Redfield Collection to our most valued customers. The pedigree of these coins is absolutely matchless. Culled from the world's largest and most famous silver dollar collection, each of these pieces was purchased by Mr. Redfield directly from a Nevada Bank and carefully stored behind a false wall in his basement. After his death, and the discovery of his more than 400,000 silver dollars, Redfield's coins sold for $7 million—the largest single numismatic transaction in history.

"Of course, each of the Redfields chosen by New England is also of the highest quality—another key factor in a coin's desirability. So each Redfield ordered from New England is sure to take a prominent place in the buyer's collection."

The ANA: Reaching Out to Collectors

By Mary Ann Bacher

"The foundation of the ANA was not laid for today alone, but for the long and distant future as well. Each member can do a little in contributing to its success." — Dr. George F. Heath, founder of the American Numismatic Association.

Photos courtesy of the American Numismatic Association

Dr. George F. Heath returned his stethoscope to its place in his black leather bag. Then he walked across the room for his coat and hurried out the door. It had been a long day and the doctor was glad to be getting home. Still, Heath sat up late that night rereading passages from books that were part of his small numismatic library. He was restless. He realized it was nearly impossible to pursue his coin collecting hobby much further as long as he was isolated in this small Michigan town of Monroe. The doctor was having trouble obtaining certain coins and books about them. He never met with fellow numismatists. So in 1888, Dr. Heath decided to reach out. He printed, published and distributed a four-page leaflet that listed his coin needs, advertised duplicates for sale and discussed various numismatic topics.

The Birth of a National Association

Dr. Heath's little leaflet, called The Numismatist, quickly found favor among the few hundred collectors who, like the doctor, were far from metropolitan areas such as Boston and New York, which supported their own numismatic societies. As The Numismatist's subscription list grew, it became clear to Dr. Heath that there was a need for a national organization of numismatists which would serve beginners as well as advanced collectors spread all over the country. So the February, 1891 issue of The Numismatist asked this question of its readers: "What is the matter with having an American Numismatic Association?" Dr. Heath wisely added, "There is nothing like the alliance of kindred pursuits to stimulate growth and interest."

Numismatists responded favorably to the doctor's campaign to organize such an association. And on October 7, 1891, five men (William G. Jerrems, David Harlow, J.A. Heckelman, John Brydon, and Heath) gathered in Chicago. Holding an additional 26 proxy votes, these collectors founded the American Numismatic Association. Dr. Heath declined the presidency in favor of his good friend, Jerrems, who was a collector of ancient coins. He did, however, conceive the idea of holding numismatic conventions where Association members could exchange ideas and coins with fellow numismatists. The first convention was held that year, and subsequent conventions were held annually until 1895. These meetings then became sporadic until 1907 when the success of that year's Columbus, Ohio, convention prompted the Association to schedule annual meetings thereafter.

Dr. Heath died suddenly on June 16, 1908. Farran Zerbe, then ANA president, began publishing The Numismatist and soon purchased the publication from Dr. Heath's heirs. In 1911, The Numismatist was purchased from Zerbe and presented to the ANA. Each issue contained Association news, answers to collector's queries, a couple of articles and a mail order advertising section.

In summing up the birth of the American Numismatic Association, Dr. Heath once said, "The foundation of the ANA was not laid for today alone, but for the long and distant future as well. Each member can do a little in contributing to its success."

That philosophy has been the cornerstone of the ANA. Since the first meeting in 1891, more than 100,000 individual and corporate members have joined the Association, and today the ANA is the largest and most active numismatic body in the world with more than 30,000 members from each of the 50 states and many foreign countries.

Exploring New Frontiers

Since 1966, ANA operations have centered in Colorado Springs—a site chosen from among 16 cities in the central region of the U.S. There the Association maintains a museum of coins, medals, tokens and paper money that, along with its library, is open to the public without charge. The Moritz Wormser Memorial Loan Exhibit, a collection of coins and medals that was displayed for 40 years at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., is among the museum's many fine collections. Additional galleries have recently been added, including the Amos Press Theater. Last summer, New England Rare Coin Galleries' specimen of the 1866 No Motto Silver Dollar, perhaps the most valuable silver coin in the world, was on exhibit at the museum. ANA members may study the items on display and, by prearrangement, other museum material.

The Colorado Springs headquarters also houses the largest circulating numismatic library in the world, with approximately 7,000 reference books and over 15,000 periodicals and catalogs. These materials are loaned to ANA members without charge (other than postage). The ANA library also includes visual education slide sets and films which member clubs may borrow for their meetings. The ANA provides these local clubs, and state and regional organizations with other services including the bi-monthly Club Bulletin, awards certificates, medals and ribbons.

As a student at last summer's week-long seminar, Brian Burke learns how to do copy work as part of the coin photography program.

ANA members who want to seriously study a particular area of numismatics may take advantage of the Association's seminar program. Week-long seminars covering various numismatic topics are held every summer at Colorado College, the campus where ANA headquarters are located. The first seminar, held in 1969, attracted 20 numismatists; the 1980 program is expected to draw approximately 150.

ANA Headquarters located on the campus of Colorado College in Colorado Springs. The Association maintains a large numismatic library here that, along with its museum, is open to the public without charge.

Coins submitted by collectors are examined under stereo microscopes to determine whether they are genuine or not. ANACS (American Numismatic Association Certification Service) examines coins for grading as well as authenticity.

Reaching out to Numismatists across the Land

To further advance the knowledge of numismatics, the ANA reaches out to numismatists across the land by bringing services directly to member's homes and communities. All ANA members, except Associates, receive The Numismatist each month free of charge. Each issue is brimming with feature articles on coins and collectors, numismatic and Association news, and quality illustrations. (Due to the scarcity of many issues prior to 1920, many articles published before that date have been reprinted in four books. The ANA also publishes indexes for easy reference.)

Working to Suppress Adverse Conduct and Practice

The ANA also provides several services aimed to protect members from adverse conduct and practice in the numismatic field.

Certification Services: The American Numismatic Association Certification Service (ANACS) performs two valuable services—authentication and grading. When certification is desired, the item is examined under a stereo microscope and, if additional testing is needed, specific gravity tests are performed. A decision is then made on the coin's authenticity. If genuine, and grading has been requested, the grade is determined using the ANA Grading Standards for United States Coins. If a coin requires still further examination, for either authenticity or grading, it is forwarded to a recognized authority in that particular field. Any item sent to ANACS for authentication will be returned with one of the following opinions: Genuine (a photographic certification will accompany the item); Cannot Be Certified (meaning the item is altered, counterfeit or otherwise not genuine); No Decision (because of corrosion, damage or other factors, a conclusion cannot be reached); or Modern Replica (meaning the item is made of base metals and sold as a souvenir or novelty). Any numismatic item sent to ANACS for grading will be returned with a photo certificate stating a determined grade for each side.

Code of Ethics: By Board action in 1965, a Code of Ethics was adopted and established. The Code, binding on each ANA member, outlines principles of moral conduct that dealers and collectors are required to follow. Any breach is considered cause for disciplinary action by the Board of Governors.

Coin Theft Reward Fund: Also established in 1965, the Fund rewards up to $5,000 to each person who furnishes information leading to the arrest and conviction of persons responsible for robberies, thefts or deaths in connection with crimes committed against ANA members.

Strengthening Relationships between Numismatists

The ANA not only advances the knowledge of numismatics, but promotes cooperation and closer ties between numismatists as well. Each year for five days in August, the Association holds a major numismatic convention in an American city. These conventions feature a large bourse room and a national auction of several sessions, bringing together many of the world's noted professional numismatists. Exhibits, educational forums, and business and awards breakfasts are also integral parts of convention activity. Members are afforded the opportunity to meet with old friends and introduce themselves to dealers and fellow collectors. A mid-year convention is held on a slightly smaller scale in another city so that members can attend at least one of these conventions with a minimum of travel.

Unfortunately, even some collectors who attend ANA conventions do not realize the full range of educational services and fraternal activities that the Association sponsors. Collectors who want to explore numismatics more fully may take advantage of these programs by joining the ANA.

New England Celebrates Boston's 350th Birthday

By Mary Ann Bacher
and Gregory P. Potter

To celebrate Boston's 350th birthday, New England Rare Coin Auctions will host a major auction in the birthplace of American coinage. Here's a preview of the Boston Jubilee Auction to be held July 24-26.

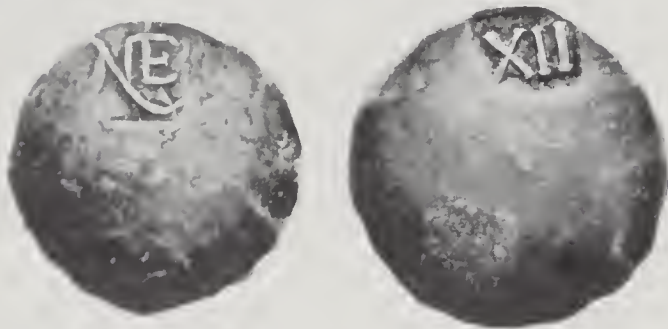

Accompanied by schooners and sloops, barks and yawls, the Tall Ships arrived on May 30 to salute Boston's 350th birthday. More than 70 majestic sailing vessels flying the flags of 16 different countries paraded through Boston Harbor. Thousands of spectators in boats and on the shore returned their salute. Later, fireworks lighted up the evening sky, silhouetting the ships which sat quietly in the Harbor. And this was just the beginning of Boston's "Jubilee 350" celebration. All summer long, the city will host music, dance and theatrical performances and other special events, including a major numismatic auction conducted by New England Rare Coin Auctions. The Boston Jubilee Auction is certain to capture the interest of numismatic historians throughout the country, since Boston is the city which gave birth to American coinage almost 350 years ago.

In the earliest days of colonial America, there was no official coinage. Trading was carried on first by barter, later through the exchange of corn, bullets, animal pelts and wampum. Wampum consisted of colored shells which were ground down to the size of corn kernels and, for convenience sake, strung on thongs and worn about the neck. So popular did this crude form of money become that, in 1637, the General Court of the Massachusetts Bay Colony declared "wampumage" legal tender "that should passe at 6 a penny for any sume under 12d."

However, Massachusetts citizens soon felt the need for a more carefully controlled medium of exchange and, in 1651, called upon the General Court to procure coinage. In the past, the Court had found this difficult to do, especially since the English government, teetering on the brink of civil war, had no time to mint coins for the colonies. Thus, the Court was forced to take matters into its own hands and, in 1652, commissioned John Jenks of Saugus, Massachusetts, and John Hull of Boston to create and mint America's first coins.

NE and Colonial Tree Coinage

The first coins struck in America were "NE" or New England pieces in three denominations: threepence, sixpence and shillings. Joseph Jenks cut the dies for these coins at his ironworks in Saugus. John Hull and his assistant Robert Sanderson minted the coins at Hull's place of business in Boston, not far from the present offices of New England Rare Coin Galleries and Auctions.

The entire series of NE coins was struck between June 11 and October 19, 1652. This, in part, accounts for their extreme rarity today. In fact, only two specimens of the threepence, and six of the sixpence, are known to exist, and each is considered priceless. Specimens of the shilling are slightly more plentiful and have been listed in the Redbook at as much as $12,500.

While minting the historic NE coins, Boston mintmaster John Hull had been careful to produce each denomination at special reduced weights. This kept the coins from being traded overseas, but it could not keep them from creating problems at home. Due to the simplicity of the NE design (see photo), many colonists found the coins easier to counterfeit than to earn. Other Bostonians took advantage of the coins' bare, flat surfaces and began shaving silver from them. By 1653, a more intricately designed series of coins was being produced at Boston: the Colonial Tree Coinage.

Three varieties of Tree Coinage were minted between 1653 and 1682. The first, called Willow Tree Coinage, was struck using a hand-held mallet. Later versions, the Oak and Pine Tree Coins, were produced on a screw press. Today, collectible specimens of Colonial Tree Coinage have been valued between $125 and $13,500, depending upon the specific coin and its condition.

The 1980 Boston Jubilee Auction

The old Boston mint closed in 1682, after only 30 years of operation. But modern collectors can still see numismatic history being made in Boston when they attend the 1980 Boston Jubilee Auction on July 24-26. The Jubilee Auction, conducted by New England Rare Coin Auctions, will feature two major consignments, as well as an exciting array of individual rarities. Foremost among these consignments is the Niemeyer Collection of $5 and $10 Indian Gold. Dr. Charles G. Niemeyer, distinguished actor, author and theater historian, assembled this collection, which is perhaps the finest and most complete in existence. (For a detailed report, see "Dr. Niemeyer's Indian Gold" on page 20.)

The second major Boston Jubilee consignment is an elegant group of coins assembled by Dr. Stan J. Woollams, M.D. Dr. Woollams has shown rare judgment and skill in his choice of each of the top-quality specimens that make up his collection. As a youngster, Dr. Woollams began collecting Lincoln Cents because it was inexpensive; buying rolls from the bank and returning individual coins he didn't need. But Woollams did not pursue numismatics further until he finished his education.

A graduate of the University of Michigan and its Medical School, Dr. Woollams took a psychiatric residency at Michigan as well. He founded the Huron Valley Institute in Ann Arbor, and as administrator of the profit-sharing pension plan, Dr. Woollams began to acquire rare coins for the plan in 1970. As the Institute grew, more funds became available, and the pension's assets were diversified into diamonds and American photographs.

The first coin Dr. Woollams bought from New England was an 1807 Half Dollar. He was so pleased with it that all of his future purchases were also from New England. Now that Dr. Woollams is leaving his post as Director of the Institute, it was decided to liquidate the coins. "I purchased the coins as a long term investment," he says. "I was expecting to hold them 25 or 30 years. It is rather a surprise to be selling them now."

LIBERTY TREE

An Exquisite Half Dollar Type Set

The Woollams Collection features an exquisite Half Dollar type set, including a magnificent 1807 Draped Bust Half Dollar. This fully struck MS-69 with unbroken lustre and beautiful blue and russet toning, has no visible marks. It is the highlight of the Woollams type set, and from the standpoint of condition alone, the highlight of the 1980 Boston Jubilee Auction as well. James L. Halperin, New England's founder and Chairman, who has personally examined more than $1 billion worth of rare coins, has stated that he has never had the pleasure of seeing an early U.S. type coin in condition even remotely resembling this magnificent specimen.

Other highlights of the Woollams type set include an 1839 No Drapery Half Dollar, MS-65, with original russet and violet toning (the only true gem No Drapery Half Dollar New England has ever handled); and an 1853 Arrows and Rays Half Dollar, MS-69, Full Strike, with blinding mint frost.

A Startling Array of Trade Dollars

A Superb 1875 Trade Dollar in MS-69 with violet and blue toning heads The Woollams Collection's startling array of Trade Dollars. The 1875 Trade Dollar is one of the great rarities of the series when in top condition, and this specimen easily rates as one of the 10 best Trade Dollars of any date. Other Trade Dollar rarities: a Superb 1873 in MS-67 with exquisite surfaces and beautiful pastel toning; an 1874 in MS-67, Full Strike, with steel-blue and gray toning; and an 1878-CC in MS-67, Fully Struck, with even light violet-gray toning, which is probably the finest 1878-CC known.

As a practicing psychiatrist for the past 21 years, Dr. Woollams has been particularly interested in group therapy and innovative therapeutic approaches. Fascinated with the work of Eric Berne, founder of Transactional Analysis and author of Games People Play, Dr. Woollams had studied with Berne, has co-authored three books in the field of psychotherapy, and has produced two training films as well. But when asked why he collects coins, Dr. Woollams prefers to give his personal rather than professional opinion. "I just like beautiful things, finding them and observing them. If I had grown up in a rural area, it might have been something biological — butterflies, maybe. But I grew up in the city."

With consignments such as the Niemeyer and Woollams Collections being offered, collectors will not want to miss the 1980 Boston Jubilee Auction to be held July 24-26 at the Hyatt Regency Hotel. A copy of the Jubilee Auction Catalog, which features nearly 2,000 lots and hundreds of photos, can be reserved by sending $5 to: NERCA, P.O. Box 1776, Boston, MA 02105.

Dr. Niemeyer's Indian Gold

By David Weinstock

Dr. Charles Niemeyer today. In July, Dr. Niemeyer's extraordinary collection of Indian Gold will be liquidated at the Boston Jubilee Auction.

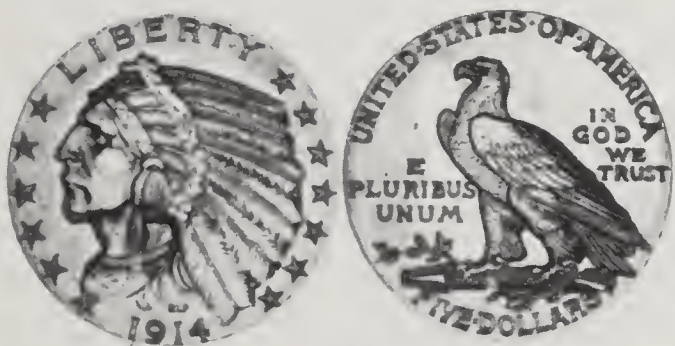

Dr. Charles Niemeyer, veteran Broadway actor, director, and theater historian, knows better than to begin a performance unprepared. Having decided, therefore, to take on the role of the coin collector, he studied his "script" and gathered his "props" with characteristic thoroughness. Dr. Niemeyer bought a Redbook and several other numismatic reference works, a subscription to Coin World, a pair of white gloves, and a green velvet mat. Only after three years of hard study and practice did he consider himself ready to purchase his first coin: a 1911 $10 Indian.

That was in 1975. But the gold piece came from a New York firm primarily involved in bullion trading. When he asked for more high-grade Eagles, Niemeyer was told that the firm could not supply any. He then turned to numismatic firms, and soon had his first encounter with New England's founder and chairman, James L. Halperin. "I asked Jim if he was qualified to help me put together a collection. He suggested that I compare his talents with the competition's. I called a number of other firms, and sure enough, I was soon convinced that Jim was the world's foremost authority on U.S. gold." Shortly thereafter, Dr. Niemeyer became a regular client of New England.

The St. Gauden's-designed Eagle, depicting Liberty in an Indian headdress, became the nucleus of Dr. Niemeyer's extraordinary collection. Pursuing the series in earnest, he quickly added high-grade specimens over a period of a years or so, completing the set. He also became intrigued with the $5 Indian of the same period, whose incuse portrait of an authentic, craggy-featured Indian chief stands in sharp contrast to the obviously European face in St. Gauden's portrait. Before long, the $5 gold set was complete also. Highlights of the Niemeyer collection, which is the featured consignment of the Boston Jubilee Auction, include the rare 1909-O $5 Indian, in MS-63, and the 1914-S (seldom seen better than EF) in MS-60. Among the Eagles, the 1908 No Motto is an exceptional coin; New England Rare Coin Auctions President Lee J. Bellisario states that the coin is probably the finest known specimen.

Dr. Niemeyer, currently a professor of Speech and Dramatic Arts at the University of Maryland, is the author of numerous articles, a book on the history of the theater and several film and television articles, a book on the history of the theater and several film and television scripts. But he is best known in theatrical circles as an actor. Niemeyer's Broadway roles during the 1930's included the show-stopping Reverend Salvation in the 1938 satirical comedy The Cradle Will Rock. Written by Marc Blitzstein at the instigation of Bertold Brecht, the play was a musical expose of society's hypocrisy. Niemeyer's characterization of the sanctimonious, war-mongering Reverend Salavation attracted critical acclaim, but the actor chose to enter academic life rather than pursue his stage career. After receiving his Ph.D. from Yale, and various teaching appointments, Niemeyer came to his present post.

Collectors who win valuable specimens from the Niemeyer Collection will not be the first hobbyists to benefit from Dr. Niemeyer's broad-ranging career. Stamp collectors will remember his role in the genesis of the 1975 postage stamp commemorating D.W. Griffith, the great American film director whose work includes Birth of a Nation, Abraham Lincoln, and Orphans of the Storm. Inspired by the 1961 French issue honoring director Georges Melies, Niemeyer conceived the idea of a memorial for the centenary of Griffith's birth. In 1969 he suggested the project to actress Lillian Gish, who was on a lecture tour promoting her book The Movies, Mr. Griffith, and Me. Miss Gish took the idea to the people, asking every audience on her tour to write the Postmaster-General in favor of the stamp. Meanwhile Niemeyer and the American Film Institute lobbied in Washington, and the project was approved.

"I grew up on a 17-acre farm during the Depression. My father was out of work. I was the first in the family to go to college. All through DePauw University, Northwestern, and Yale, I had scholarships. I wouldn't have had the life I had if it weren't for those who helped me. And now I want to help others."

Last month I bought a $20 Legal Tender note, signed by Chittendon and Spinner. The condition was only fair, but the price was right . . . or so I thought at the time. Now a dealer informs me that the note is a "contemporary counterfeit." I'm wondering whether to demand my money back from the seller, or hang onto the fake for historical interest. Any thoughts? — S.B., Sheboygan, WI

Any reputable dealer should return your money promptly, even if he didn't offer a formal guarantee of authenticity. Remind him that an 1861 $20 is still bona fide U.S. currency, and it is just as illegal to pass a counterfeit of it, as of a modern note.

But if you choose to keep the piece, there is a wealth of history attached to it, as an example of wartime counterfeiting. Flooding an enemy's economy with bogus currency is a time-honored form of economic warfare. It was first begun by the British during the American Revolution, contributing to the already rapid decline in value of the Continental currency. Your note is probably the work of a Confederate engraver attempting to sabotage the chief advantage of the North, its industrial economy.

U.S. and colonial paper money frequently carries a stern warning of the penalties for counterfeiting. On the L1 1769 Georgia Lighthouse Certificate shown here, the warning is curiously disguised in an upside-down and backwards jumble of letters, which can be unscrambled to read: "TO COUNTERFEIT IS DEATH WITHOUT BENEFIT OF CLERGY VIDE ACT." ("Vide" means "see", referring would-be felons to the Act which prohibited counterfeiting.) Although it may seem odd to have concealed the warning thus, remember that any printer skillful enough to attempt a counterfeit would have learned to read mirror-writing during his boyhood apprenticeship.

Incidentally, this note would have been almost impossible to counterfeit. Note the intricate border, composed of printer's flowers and other characters, mostly astronomical symbols intended for almanac printing. At the time, the American typefounding industry was in its infancy. A lack of skilled craftsmen and the essential metal antimony forced the colonists to import all their printing type from abroad. Chances are that no other printer could have duplicated the array of symbols that appear on the note.

Years ago, I heard about a coin known as the "death dollar," but now I can't find any reference to it. Do you know which coin goes by that gloomy name? — F.D., Devon PA

In fact, we have heard of two coins known as the "death dollar." The first was issued in 1928, by the government of Kweichow, China, to commemorate the completion of a vast road-building program. The 1-yuan coin (equivalent in value to a silver dollar) portrays an automobile traveling along the broad new road. By the roadside are lines which appear to be random blades of grass. But worked into the pattern of the grass blades are the Chinese characters forming the name of Chow Hsi-ch'eng, the ambitious general who was governor of the province. The hidden signature was widely considered to be an act of conceit and self-aggrandizement, and many soothsayers predicted that Chow would die in an auto crash. In fact, Chow did die violently in a car within a year, though not by accident. As he was driving to battle, his car was surrounded by enemy troops, and he was shot.

A more recent "death dollar" is the Canadian 1958 British Columbia Commemorative shown here. The reverse depicts an Indian totem pole. The top figure on the pole is a raven, a carrion bird which the Indians of the region considered to be a symbol of death and bad luck. The coin was widely condemned as an inappropriate use of Indian religious art.

After reviewing a recent issue of Coin Dealer Newsletter, I have a few questions regarding the relationship between mintage figures and ask prices of Three Cent Silver in MS-60. I was under the impression that the lower a coin's original mintage, the scarcer the coin and, subsequently, the higher its value. However according to CDN, MS-60 specimen of Type I Three Cent Silver sell for about the same price as Type III's. Yet, the original mintage figure for Type I coins is substantially higher than for Type III's. Does this mean that Type I's are overpriced? By the same token, why does CDN value Type II's at about twice the price of Type III's when the mintage of Type III's is three times as high as Type II's? — A.O., New York, NY

It is true that, to a large extent, scarcity determines a coin's value. But original mintage is not always an accurate indication of scarcity. The true test of scarcity is a coin's "survival ratio" — i.e. how much of the original mintage exists today. In the case of Three Cent Silver the overall survival ratio for Type I's is slightly better than for Type III's. So it would seem that Type I's should cost less than Type III's. However, in high grades, the survival ratio for Type I's is considerably lower than for Type III's. Subsequently, truly high-grade Type I's are about impossible to acquire, thus creating greater demand for lower-grade Type I's. This tremendous demand has boosted the price of MS-60 Type I's to a level equal with MS-60 Type III's.

To answer your second question, the reason that Type II Three Cent Silver is almost twice the price of Type III is that the survival ratio for Type II coins is very low. Planchet defects caused striking problems during the minting of Type II coins, and many specimens were rejected by the Mint as unacceptable for circulation. Much of the original Type III mintage survived however, probably because of collectors who considered these low mintage coins "rare" and, therefore, preserved them.

Market Report

by Tim LaPointe

At the Shows

In contrast to last month, the numismatic calendar for May was light, with only a few mid-size conventions and no major U.S. auctions. In June, show activity is picking up with shows and auctions scattered throughout the month, including the Long Beach Coin & Stamp Show (June 5-8); the International Paper Money Show (June 6-8), the Lake Tahoe Show (June 17-21), the RCDA (June 20-22); and auctions by both Bowers & Ruddy and Hughes (June 9-10). In general, dealers and investors alike showed keen interest in early type coins this month, with rare dates and true Gems commanding substantial prices.

Gold

Since our last report, the prime rate has declined sharply, dropping a full 7 percentage points since April, and many other short-term rates have fallen as much as 10 points. However, the market has begun to sense that the Carter Administration — in the midst of its re-election campaign — will take action to reverse this downward spiral. Gold buyers are now betting that this pump priming will, in turn, reflate the economy. As a result, gold jumped $110 this month and is currently at $625 per ounce. As expected, gold bullion coins such as Maple Leafs and Mexican Pesos rose accordingly. California Gold Piece highlighted May's Market for rare gold coins in response to the outstanding prices realized at New England's Metropolitan New York Sale in early April. Proof Gold sold well in May, but at slightly lower levels than in previous months due to profit-taking. Gem gold type coins were in strong demand, as were early gold coins (those dating from the late 1700's to the early 1800's) in all conditions.

Silver

Following a two-month decline, silver bounced back in May. Silver bullion is currently at $16.50 per ounce, a $3 rise from our last report. In the dime market, Mercury Dimes held strong, with Gem specimens commanding premium prices. For instance: an 1918-D with full split bands recently traded hands for $2,500; a 1925-P traded for $350; a 1928-D for $2,500; and a 1928-S for $1,000. While Roosevelt Dimes slowed in May, prices should rebound in coming weeks due to the recent rise in silver bullion prices. Early dimes were actively sought by dealers in May. A 1796 true Gem specimen, valued by the latest issue of The Coin Dealer Newsletter at $39,000, was recently sold to a dealer for a mid five-figure price; and Gem 1807 and 1805 specimens also traded in this range.

Copper, Colonials

The market for Colonial copper coinage is very active, with most major dealers seeking high-quality specimens. At the Long Beach Show, a 1788 Virginia Penny traded hands between dealers for a five-figure amount, and a 1776 Continental Dollar sold for $11,500. Many analysts view these prices as a strong indication that the market for Colonial Copper coinage is about to take off.

In the copper market, Indian Cents, and Two Cent Pieces in Mint State or Proof condition are now being actively sought by most major dealers, while Half Cents and Large Cents are being bought up in any condition. This activity is probably a result of a consensus among dealers that copper coins are still undervalued on today's market.

Currency

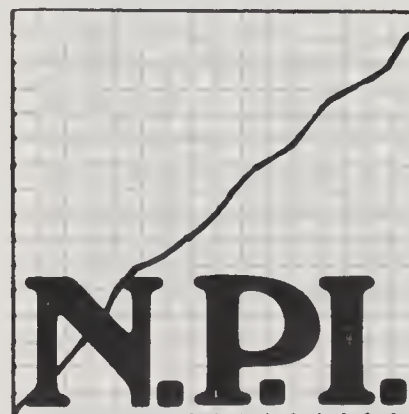

The highlighted convention this month was Memphis '80, the International Paper Money Show (held June 6-8) which each year attracts dealers from across the U.S. and from abroad. The three-day convention and auction was attended by collectors and dealers of all types of paper money — from obsolete currency to foreign bank notes. Naturally, U.S. currency was the most dominant feature at dealer bourse tables. The higher 1980 price levels enticed some new material into the market, but on the whole, supplies of Gem currency remained quite thin, with only a limited supply of Gem original notes.

Aside from the major rarities, there was a lack of quality material such as Woodchopper notes ($5 1880 and 1907 Legal Tenders), $2 1899 Silver Certificates, $2 1862 Legal Tenders, Rainbow series notes and U.S. Gold Certificates. Most dealers are beginning to turn to the more reasonably priced, and still undervalued, fractional currency and small size currency. The Memphis '80 Auction was quite active with strong dealer interest in Choice and Gem notes. The hot item of both the bourse floor and the auction were Cut Sheets of all series. The reason may be that collectors and investors who purchase a cut sheet have four sequentially numbered original notes, which should increase in value at a slightly higher rate than individual pieces.

World Coins

The coins of Great Britain, especially Proof issues, continued a strong market drive in May. At the Chicago International Coin Fair (held May 30-31), four-piece gold Proof sets were offered to other dealers for about $5,700, or double the price of one year ago. In addition, the CICF Auction was full of surprises, with prices realized again double to triple estimates. Among the most surprising issues was the 1915 Cuba Gold Proof set. This particular set had been offered to the public at $27,500 just a few months ago and did not sell. Subsequently, the set was broken into individual lots and offered at the CICF Auction. The most astounding thing was that when the sale prices for each of the coins were added together, they equaled $52,000 — a $25,000 increase over the price offered for the set just a few months ago. Of the first 1500 lots of the CICF Auction, no more than 20 went to the mail. The rest went to floor bidders who were predominantly dealers. This shows that dealers, including dealers in U.S. coins, are recognizing the strength of the foreign market and are trying to build a stock before the prices of world coins erupt.

Rare Coins: The Changing Marketplace

Accelerating demand from new collectors and pure investors is changing the complexion of the rare coin market. Here's a look at recent developments from New England Rare Coin Galleries.

Coin collecting is a hobby as old as coins themselves. In every age, kings, princes, lords and ladies have found coins a fascinating source of historical, aesthetic and financial value. Nero, Copernicus, Michelangelo, Frederick the Great and Louis XV are among those who interested themselves with coins. In more recent times, coin collecting has fascinated people from all walks of life. In this century, and particularly since World War I, rare coins have become more attractive to American collectors. The number of U.S. collectors of rare coins has expanded from 1/2 million in 1954 to 2 million in 1960, to 12 million in 1978.

However, many of the people who are buying rare coins today aren't collectors at all, but rather investors who are impressed with rare coins' current growth and long-term potential. Over the past 20 years, the average annual compound appreciation of pre-1934 rare U.S. coins in mint condition has exceeded 20%. The years 1974-1979 show even higher gains, averaging 35%. Given this performance record, rare coins have proven a more reliable inflation hedge than most traditional paper assets as well as many tangibles, including gold and silver bullion.

As the investment community's interest in rare coins has grown, there has been a tremendous boom in the numismatic business. Many coin dealers have taken on a financial image as evidenced by their advertisements in numismatic media and their entry into financial publications. New England Rare Coin Galleries has begun offering shares from New England Rare Coin Partnership I* — the first public offering of a limited partnership ever funded with rare coins.

For these reasons, The Wall Street Journal and many other financial and general interest publications are spreading the good news about rare coins, and accelerating demand is adding pressure to the already strong rare coin market. And as today's collecting arena grows more competitive, collectors who once regarded coin collecting purely as a hobby are now realizing rare coins' financial potential. Subsequently, many collectors are reassessing the way they collect. Some have given up purchases made solely on the basis of their own personal aesthetic tastes. Others are building two collections: one for their personal aesthetic enjoyment and one for financial potential. Many of these collectors are enrolling in collection/investment programs to help build the value of their collections on a regular basis.

There are two basic types of programs to choose from: "pre-packaged" programs or "personally-tailored" programs. The pre-packaged program provides the participant with a specified dollar amount of a specified coin type over a specified period of time. (For instance there are Silver Dollar Clubs which advertise in numismatic publications offering $200 worth of Morgan Dollars each month.) The advantages of such a program are clear, especially for the beginner. First, there's very little work involved for the collector/investor. Second, the coins received will probably be of a more consistently high quality than those acquired through "treasure hunting" — picking and choosing coins from catalogs or advertisements. Third, and perhaps most important for anyone interested in building up his financial portfolio, this steady influx of coins makes it easy to add value on a regular basis.

Those who want more flexibility and diversity in their collecting activities often choose a personally-tailored program. With this type of collection/investment plan, collectors can determine their own collecting strategy and at the same time take advantage of professional numismatic guidance. They can discuss their personal goals and preferences with a numismatist who will be in constant readiness to further refine details of the program if the collector's goals shift. This rapport between the collector and numismatist means better service for the collector. Often, a numismatist will call his clients to inform them of newly available coin offerings before those coins are offered through catalogs or advertisements. This is an important advantage for those collectors who are finding it increasingly difficult to locate new specimens of top-quality coinage in today's highly competitive market.

Tax-Deferred Vehicles for Long-Term Growth

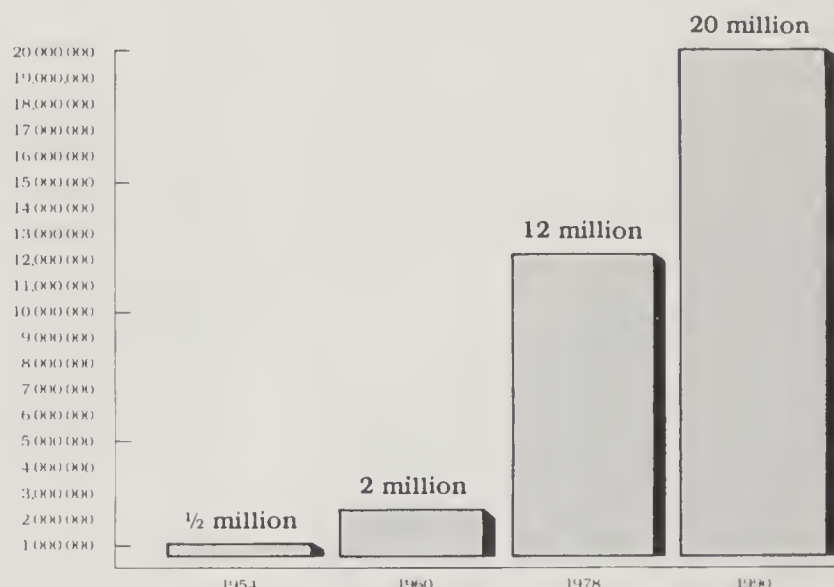

As collectors and investors acquire coins, many place them in vehicles for long-term capital growth. Today rare coins are being positioned in tax-sheltered and tax-exempt plans as a way to diversify, stabilize and boost the overall growth of those plans. For persons who are self-employed or employed and earning outside income, for instance Keogh is the best retirement plan available. It allows them to shelter up to $7,500 in pre-tax earnings. And for new business owners or free-lancers, a Keogh may allow them to shelter as much as 100% of their pre-tax outside earnings. Thus, a Keogh plan not only helps build a substantial retirement fund, it also saves a person thousands of dollars while he works.

For the investor, placing rare coins in a Keogh is an excellent way to boost the plan's growth. Rare coins can be included in new, existing or even frozen Keoghs. For example, if frozen (or inactive) Keogh funds are bringing low returns, those funds can be transferred ("rolled over") into rare coins. Placing coins in Keoghs is also proving beneficial for collectors. The plan provides an inexpensive (tax-free) way to build up a collection. The collector can buy and sell rare coins tax-free as long as the profits are put back into the Keogh. And that profit can be reinvested in more rare coins. When the collector finally reaches retirement, he pays income taxes on the amounts withdrawn from the plan. This way the collector minimizes taxation because at retirement his tax bracket is usually relatively low.

Rare coins are also popular assets for several other tax-deferred plans. Pension and profit-sharing plans are benefiting from rare coins' high growth, particularly in today's economy, where many traditional assets are failing to provide capital preservation, let alone capital growth. Rare coins are also being positioned in trust funds — well established means to circumvent inheritance and gift taxes. Traditionally, the trust fund has been an important tax-exempt method for building a child's estate or providing for his education. And a rare coin trust fund combines the tax advantages of the trust fund concept with the high growth potential and minimal maintenance features of rare coins.

By 1990, the U.S. Collector population is expected to exceed 20 million.

The Future

Experts now anticipate that more than 8 million additional collectors will enter the rare coin market in the next 10 years. Most of these new collectors will be keenly aware of rare coins' tremendous financial potential, and many major rare coin firms are already preparing new services to meet their needs. Some firms, for example, are now planning further limited partnerships along the lines of New England Rare Coin Partnership I. Others, like New England, are making highly affordable ancient and world coins readily available to their clients. All of these firms feel optimistic about the future financial potential of rare coins. As New England's Chairman of the Board James L. Halperin stated in a recent interview in The Rosen Numismatic Advisory:

"There really is tremendous potential in the coin market and . . . the investor market is really just in its infancy. None of the huge corporate pension funds or any of the really big money has gotten into rare coins as yet. And, something like that could . . . propel rare coin prices way beyond what they are today . . . to the point where they could go up again as much as they already have in the last few years."

Serving the collecting public in a totally new way

New England Rare Coin Galleries' Ancient and World Coin Division

A new service for collectors

New England Rare Coin Galleries, world's largest dealer in rare U.S. coinage, also offers an exciting selection of ancient and world coins through its new Ancient and World Coin Division. Established in September of 1979, New England's latest collector service division is headed by internationally-renowned numismatist Frank Garofalo. Mr. Garofalo's considerable numismatic skills have been sharply developed by almost two decades of professional rare coin experience. Before joining New England, he ran his own highly successful coin dealership and served as a District Representative for the American Numismatic Association. Under his direction, New England's Ancient and World Coin Division now brings history's most desirable numismatic rarities to today's collector.

New England World Selections™

New England World Selections is the official catalog of New England Rare Coin Galleries' Ancient and World Coin Division. Each issue of this quality bi-monthly publication offers its readers a spectacular selection of world coinage; a world coin market report; beautiful coin photography (much of it in full color); and many special features. For a free trial subscription to New England World Selections, call New England Rare Coin Galleries toll-free: 800-225-6794 (in Massachusetts: 617-227-8800). New England's Ancient and World Coin Division will be happy to include you on our mailing list.

U.S. Currency

Please Note: Key to U.S. Currency grading appears on page 46.

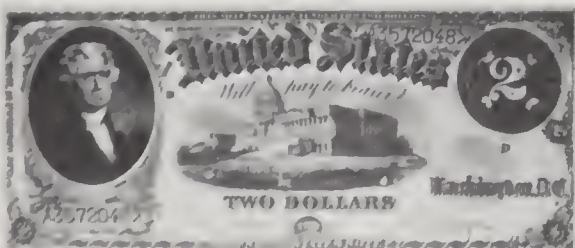

Above all else, New England's directors are committed to keeping our firm's resources, and our customers, on the very top of the numismatic market. This is why, in October of 1979, after months of preparation, we published our first offering of U.S. Currency in Inventory Selections. We felt that this relatively untapped area of numismatics, so richly rewarding for lovers of history and engraving, would soon be experiencing new levels of popularity. Our predictions are now holding true, and many New England collectors are already diversifying their numismatic holdings with these intriguing collectibles. If you are among these collectors, you'll realize the fine value and superb quality represented by this month's U.S. Currency offerings. If you are new to Currency collecting, call your New England numismatist toll-free for information. He'll be happy to explain how high-quality U.S. Currency could expand your collecting horizons.

Come to a major rare coin auction ...
in the birthplace of American coinage.

The Boston Jubilee Auction!

The Boston Jubilee Auction

In 1652, the first coins struck in America were produced in Boston. Mint Master John Hull minted silver shillings, sixpence and threepence — the famous New England, Willow, Pine, and Oak Tree coinage — in a small wooden shed, not far from the present offices of New England Rare Coin Auctions.

The old Boston mint closed in 1682, after only 30 years of operation. But you can still see numismatic history being made in Boston ... when you attend the Boston Jubilee Auction on July 25 and 26. Join thousands of other collectors in helping New England Rare Coin Auctions celebrate Boston's Jubilee 350 anniversary, with a major auction of the finest in rare U.S. coins.

... featuring the Niemeyer Collection of Indian Gold.

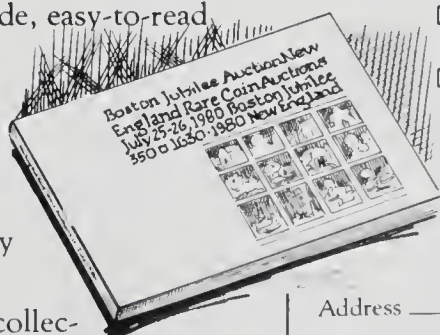

The featured consignment in the Boston Jubilee Auction will be the Niemeyer Collection of $5 and $10 Indian Gold. Dr. G. Charles Niemeyer of Washington, D.C., distinguished author, actor, and theatrical historian, assembled this exemplary collection, perhaps the finest and most complete in existence of the two series.
